- 52 THE CREST AND CORONEL OF A TILTING HEAUME, in leather, embossed and painted, formed as the neck and head of a monster, roped coronel in alternate bands of black, yellow and red

Florentine—late 15th Century—17 in. high

These crests are rare, and seldom met with; there is one somewhat similar in the Armeria Royale at Madrid, but it is less spirited in design

(No. 159, Pl. 10)

- 53 AN IVORY SADDLE, with high curled pommel and double semi-circular cantle, it is composed of wood lined with leather and birch bark, and covered with plaques of polished stag's horn carved in low relief with ribbands and inscriptions; in the centre of the saddle are two oblong slits through which to pass the girths; probably Burgundian—late 14th Century—12 in. high

(No. 164, Pl. 10)

- 54 A CIRCULAR BUCKLER, of wood, covered with cuir boulli, painted, a circular aperture for a lantern (?) at the top; the face is embossed and tooled with the seated figure of a cardinal, before whom kneel two figures of soldiers unfurling a flag, in border of conventional scrolls on a matted ground; in the interior are two circular panels containing the figures of Fame and Music, on a groundwork of scrolls, &c.—Italian, late 16th Century—16 in. diam.

(No. 293, Pl. 18)

- 55 A SHIELD, OF WOOD COVERED WITH PARCHMENT AND GESSO curiously curved at the bottom, straight upper edge, with shaped opening for the passage of the lance (?); it is decorated in high relief with the heraldic figure of a lion holding a shield and wearing a heaume (now missing); for crest a girl's head winged on either side; the whole of the groundwork is covered with conventional scrolls in low relief, painted and gilt—Florentine, 15th Century—25 in. high by 20 $\frac{3}{4}$ in. broad

(No. 172, Pl. 11)
